PREFACE.

This Index has been compiled after a careful reading of all the notes in the fifty-three volumes of Annotated Cases. It covers not only the principal annotations but all supplementary matter, even though such matter has not, in the reports, any separate headings. This Index is not a mere compilation of titles of notes which are often quite general; full reference has been made to discussions comprised in the notes regardless of the general titles.

The system of cross-references has been made as simple as possible, the purpose being to group under each title all such notes as are cognate to its subject, thus avoiding the frequent necessity of sending the searcher from one topic to another. Further than this, a great many common sense or practical headings have been introduced, in order to put the searcher more quickly in possession of the application of a legal principle to the particular question he has in mind.

To facilitate search for particular points the Index references have been arranged alphabetically, thus avoiding the necessity of reading every note under a topic or a division thereof when looking for a certain point.

In addition to this Index of the notes, the publishers have issued, in two volumes, a complete Digest of the cases found in this series of reports. This Index and that Digest of the reported cases should be used in conjunction, for in this book the notes alone are referred to.

EUGENE G. KREIDER.

PREFACE

The Index has been compiled after a careful reading of all the notes in the collection, and is intended to be a guide to the reader. It covers not only the principal questions but all subsidiary matters, such as the names of the authors, the titles of the reports, and the subjects of the cases. The Index is not a mere compilation of titles of notes which are given in the text, but it is a guide to the reader in the selection of the notes which are of interest to him.

The system of cross-references has been made as simple as possible, the purpose being to enable the reader to find all such notes as are connected with a given subject. The system is intended to be a guide to the reader in the selection of the notes which are of interest to him.
